Following Jesus...

Dr. Jeff Roberts, Senior Pastor
jroberts@tbcraleigh.com • Twitter: @Jeff__Roberts

One of the questions that constantly challenges the church is how to be relevant within a secular culture. In the history of the church, there has been times when the church was separated from culture and counter culture. There have been times when the church has been part of the culture and a transforming part of the culture. There have also been times when the church has been the “culture.” In nations where there was and is a “state” church, the church dominated the culture and this was not good for the church or the culture. It is always dangerous spiritually when the church loses its unique voice in culture.

In my life, I would suggest that I have seen one of these shifts. Although many might argue that the church never really dominated American culture, for me growing up in the south as a Baptist, life revolved around the church and seemingly everyone I knew went to church somewhere or at least recognized they needed too. It was an accepted part of life that church was to be a part of your life and if it was not, then there was surely something wrong with you. This was not just the church’s opinion, it was present in the culture. If you were going to run for office you better belong to a church if you even thought of being elected to office. If you were going to be a civic leader it was advantageous for you to be a church member. These norms are no longer true in most places in the United States. The church has lost its influence in the sense that being a member of a church is a prerequisite for being accepted and respected in culture. In fact, in many places being a part of the church is a foreign experience. Increasingly dedicated Christians who make the church a central part of their family’s routine and experience are seen as odd and out of touch with what is truly important. As Andrew Root reminds us “you don’t get scholarships for going to youth group meetings but for playing soccer, hockey, basketball, lacrosse, playing in the band etc.” The adult version of this is you don’t get a raise for serving in the church, but for working longer and neglecting worship and the work of the congregation.

The shift from church dominating culture to church within culture has caused many of us to be anxious about our culture and the future of the church. We fear the day when the church becomes completely counter cultural (many will argue we are there). When the church becomes truly counter cultural, then real persecution becomes a part of the church’s experience. This is evident in many places in the world. Many would argue the church should always been counter cultural and it is only when we the true unique voice is the message of the gospel heard.

Should we fear these shifts? The answer is no. The church has been here before. In fact, this experience describes the early church and the very culture into which the church was born. Beginning this week we will begin a study of 1 Corinthians on Wednesday nights. The title for our study is "The Church in a Secular Culture." I invite you to join us as we learn from those of the early church how they not only survived, but thrived and were transformed in the process of being faithful to God and each other. Join us at 6:15 p.m. in the Chapel.

MS Choir Trip

Adult Choir Make-up Rehearsal

Make sure you mark your calendars, as we need to catch-up on our music. Losing 3 rehearsals is challenging, but I know that we will overcome!

Calling servants who have skills and are teachable! We need you!

Do you have interests or gifts in videography? Last week, I presented to you a great need we have in our music and worship ministry. We are in need of more people to join our Video Team. Every Sunday, a small team of folks provide this fantastic opportunity for people outside of the church to watch our worship service through Internet streaming via our church website. Without these people, we may not reach others who cannot come to worship or those who are watching our church to find out more about it. If you have gifts that can be utilized or interests in training for something new, please consider this important ministry of our church. Call me for more details. We welcome your involvement!

Rev. Andy Jung, ajung@tbcraleigh.com ▲ Rev. Lydia Tatum, ltatum@tbcraleigh.com

Words from Andy In a blog post by Dr. Tommy Givens, a New Testament Studies professor at Fuller Seminary, he challenges the “old” definition of the Gospel. Dr. Givens defines the “old” definition as a “boiled-down series of abstract statements to be “believed.” He describes them as “colorless statements about God’s love, sin, and Jesus’ death.” He argues that the problem with this gospel is that it narrows the focus to just theories about God and the world. He states, “The result is a gospel that underestimates the difficulties of life, promotes pat answers to hard questions and shallow interpretation of the Bible, and is boring.”

So what is the Gospel according to Dr. Givens? “It is a contextually sensitive rendering of the history in which [Christians and non-Christians] bodily find themselves, a story through which the God of Israel has been gathering a very imperfect people in order to bless them and the whole world in and through them with embodied life together to its fullest. The meaning of key terms to which we have tried to boil the gospel down—God’s love, sin, salvation—must be found in the colors and contours of this story.” He goes on to say that believing in the gospel is “participating in the growing life of His people as followers of Jesus by the power of the Spirit of His resurrection.”

If we approach the Gospel from this perspective, what are the implications? The primary implication is that we cannot grow in our understanding of the Gospel without being in relationship with one another. God is revealed in our loving one another. It teaches us how to care for each other, how to share our possessions with one another, and how to empty ourselves for the sake of others. This is the Gospel our students and young adults are willing to surrender their lives to. The impactful nature of God’s relationship with His creation and our relationship with one another will bring true meaning to “Jesus is Lord.” May we live and preach this powerful Gospel to all.

Education & Families

Rev. Karen Metcalf Eickhoff, kmetcalf@tbcraleigh.com

But as for me and my household, we will serve the Lord. – Joshua 24:15

Faith Begins at Home. On Sunday evening we discussed several questions during the Family Ties Round Table discussion. Here are few for you to consider as you examine your own family and their faith experience.

- If a complete stranger visited your home, based on what he/she sees, what would that individual say you worship?
- If Jesus came to visit and stayed in your home tomorrow, what changes would you make? What prevents you from making those changes today?

Studies are revealing that some reasons why parents are not taking the lead in discipling the family may be: A) Parents did not experience what it was like to have Christ as part of home when they grew up and B) The church has gotten more proficient in Christian Education that the church has enabled parents to forfeit their responsibility. Think about your own family.

- What responsibility are you passing on to the church in the area of Faith for your family? (those at home and those in other states.)

I challenge you as parents, grandparents, and significant care givers to explore these questions and begin to share faith as a family in a deeper and more committed way.

Words from Carla

In the past three weeks, I have been amazed and blessed with the volunteers that come on Sundays and Wednesdays to give of their time and gifts to all of our preschoolers! You all are appreciated and words cannot express my gratitude for all that you do! You are a valued part of Trinity Baptist Church! You are laying foundations and planting seeds in our next generation. They need your Godly wisdom and guidance to be equipped with God's love and His word. Thank you for your service to the Lord and willingness to be used by Him to touch the lives of the children!

“We love because He first loved us.”

– 1 John 4:19

Last week may have been filled with making Valentine cards for your children to give out to their friends, or buying special ones that they chose to deliver. They get excited to be able to express themselves through exchanging a card that usually has a treat with it and receiving one from their friends, as well. They are expressing love! When a child reaches for your hand, they love and trust the hand they are reaching for. Grab hold and cherish that moment of bonding with your child. Sometimes we grab theirs to protect them from potential harm or to keep them close to us. Take time to hold their hand, just because. It builds trust between the two of you.

My prayer for parents is that you will continue to reach for your heavenly Father's hand during the journey of parenthood. He is waiting for you to trust Him, so take a hold of His outstretched hand!
